Airport fury as Kent told: The only way is not Essex

Counties in war of words as Osborne to consider new South East runways

EXCLUSIVE By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

A PROPOSAL by Kent County Council leader Paul Carter to site a new airport in Essex has been blasted as "stupid and thoughtless or worse, rude and deliberately disingenuous" by the leader of Thurrock Council.

In what is fast becoming a major political hot potato, the Essex council chief was left fuming after the KCC leader suggested Thurrock – better known as the home to shopping complex Lakeside – was a better site than Kent for the proposed new multi-billion pound airport hub.

And the Essex politician suggested the remarks could put a huge strain on relations as the two counties look to work together as part of the new-looking Local Enterprise Partnership for the South East.

Cllr Carter's comments came after Chancellor George Osborne finally confirmed this week the Government would be looking at all options to increase air capacity in the South East.

That includes the hugely controversial proposals put forward by London Mayor Boris Johnson for an airport island in the Thames Estuary, and architect Lord Foster's plans to build a terminal on the Isle of Grain.

Speaking to Kent on Sunday, Conservative chief Cllr Carter said: "The Government has said it needs to search the options across the South East. In my view that throws up two or three options."

He said one option would be to build another runway at Gatwick with a fast rail link to Heathrow; the £50 billion Isle of Grain proposal; or a third option.

He explained: "There is a much better location which is on the north side of the Thames near the London Gateway

REGENERATION

Supermarket giant key player as council agree to town centre revamp

By James Benjamin

editorial@archant.co.uk

AMBITIOUS proposals to transform Sittingbourne town centre, with a giant new Tesco sat at its heart, have been given the green light by Swale Borough Council.

The planning committee unanimously approved plans to allow Spenhill, a subsidiary of the supermarket colossus, to help regenerate the town centre in partnership with the developer-led Spirit of Sittingbourne consortium. It could mean up to 650 new jobs being created as a result of a multi-million pound investment.

The application for Milton Creek includes a refurbishment of The Forum and new retail units between the centre at St Michael's Road. It will see The Forum increase in size by 40 per cent.

A key part of the plans include a Tesco Extra.

Spenhill's planning applications include new shopping facilities and parking on the Milton Creek site as well as a new bridge connecting the north of the town with the town centre, which received planning consent in June.

Regional corporate affairs manager for Tesco, Jonathan Simpson, said: "We are naturally very pleased with the planning committee's decision."

"This marks a major milestone for the regeneration of Sittingbourne and will have a huge positive impact on the economy and vitality of the area. We now look forward to making our proposals reality as soon as possible."

However, proposals for a new superstore at the site of the former paper mill in the town have been put on hold. Developer Essential Land wants to see a new Morrisons store and water-side project. But concerns over increased parking have seen a decision delayed.

port [Thurrock] which is currently under construction. It is the most logical and cost-effective way, which would create the least environmental impact."

But Thurrock Council's Labour leader, John Kent, reacted furiously to the suggestion.

He told us: "He doesn't like the Isle of Grain or the so-called 'Boris Island' in the middle of the Thames Estuary, because, he suggests, and I quote: 'I think there's a better solution on the other side of the estuary in Thurrock'."

"Well I think he doesn't know what he is talking about. It's not simply outrageous, it's offensive to make such a suggestion without even a single reference to Thurrock council."

"This is not the first time Kent has seen fit to suggest major infrastructure being built in Thurrock; just over a year ago they came up with the bridge proposal

[for a third Thames crossing] – again not even bothering to talk with us.

"Does Kent think it's so big it can trample over us with no reaction?"

Both KCC and Medway Council say they will fight both the Grain and Boris Island proposals, but Cllr Carter admitted the economic arguments for increasing air capacity in the South East could not be ignored.

He said: "The Government is looking at the essential need for increased airport capacity in the South East if London is to remain a centre for international aviation. Clearly we are losing a lot of passenger movements to Amsterdam's Schiphol Airport in Holland."

"We are as opposed to the Isle of Grain as before because there is this better option [in Thurrock]. It not a special landscape area, it is flat and Dubai Ports have proved you can reclaim land there by dredging the new deep sea port.

"The Isle of Grain is too far out of London and the transport connections to connect there would cost a fortune compared to linking it to Thurrock and the infrastructure of the High Speed 1 rail line and Crossrail."

But Thurrock leader Cllr Kent said the comments could cause major cracks in the working relationship between the two counties.

He added: "Kent is supposed to be our partner in the Local Enterprise Partnership, a partnership in which we, Thurrock, are the strategic lead for transportation. How can we be confident our lead is being taken seriously when we come across stupid and thoughtless, or worse rude and deliberately disingenuous, statements like this?"

"I will be writing to Mr Carter enclosing a large map of our borough and I will ask him to tell us exactly where he suggests the new Gatwick, the new Heathrow, should go."

Meanwhile, Medway Council, which has also objected to an airport in the Thames Estuary, did not comment on Cllr Carter's suggestion.

A spokesman said: "Both Kent County Council and Medway Council unanimously agree that we vehemently oppose the Mayor of London's airport proposal and his backing of plans put forward for the Hoo Peninsula."

An Essex County Council spokesman said: "The real issue is whether there is a need for additional airport capacity in the South East, especially given planning consents on existing airports in both Essex and Kent."

"Stansted alone already has potential to serve 35 million passengers per annum and Southend is also a growing airport so there is already airport capacity in the South East. We will welcome the opportunity to take part in that debate"

PANTOMIME

Check out the Hook while Ice does panto

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

IT MAY have been almost two decades since Vanilla Ice 'rocked the mic like a vandal', but the Ice Ice Baby star is back with a vengeance – and he's bringing a Hollywood star with him.

Not content with his eight-week stint earlier this year on ITV's Dancing on Ice, the 90s American rap star has returned to Britain on another of what he calls his "great adventures".

While it could be seen as an attempt to further revive his UK career, the enthusiasm and excitement he exudes over his new role as Captain Hook in Chatham's Central Theatre production of Peter Pan shows there's no denying he's itching to get out on stage.

Taking time out from his first day of rehearsals, Ice – real name Robert Van Winkle – spoke to us about the upcoming Christmas pantomime, his successful American TV career with DIY reality show The Vanilla Ice Project and his ongoing music career.

He also revealed the name of the Hollywood star who has promised to fly across the pond to see him perform as Hook.

"I'd never even heard of a pantomime before. I thought 'what the heck is this?' but it's so much fun," he said.

"I don't want to change the character of Captain Hook too much, but with panto you can do that a little bit. I'm sure there's going to be some rapping in there and I'll be putting my own spin on the character. It's great that I can interact with the audience, too.

STOP, COLLABORATE AND LISTEN: Vanilla Ice is back with a brand new invention of himself

"I'll be there for the kids but there may be some parents who come along who remember the Ice Ice Baby time. I'm hope the UK starts tuning back into what Vanilla Ice is doing and that new fans come and see the show.

"I love it here in England. It's something about the people. They're more witty and have a laugh at things."

Ice – who recently finished filming the upcoming comedy I Hate You, Dad, with Adam Sandler – said he would be spending the Christmas period over here with his family.

"I'm going to fly my children over to the see the panto," he said.

"Adam Sandler said he would be coming over to see it too. He's a really down to earth person. He's a real champion.

"Jedward also said they were going to come and see the show."

Asked what he thought of the Irish twins' version of his hit record Ice Ice Baby on X Factor, Ice said: "Somebody phoned me and told me about these two doing the song.

"I didn't even know what X Factor was at the time but I watched it and saw these kids doing Ice Ice Baby. I think they're awesome. They have so much energy."

Ice, who has just released his album WTF (Wisdom, Tenacity and Focus), admitted he had a jam-packed schedule over the next few months, even having to fly back to America between Peter Pan rehearsals to squeeze in a charity event called Toys for Tots.

Ice will be playing Captain Hook alongside CBeebies star Katy Ashworth as Peter Pan at The Central Theatre from December 8-31.

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Port terminal approved

THE Government has given the go-ahead to plans to build a second ferry terminal at Dover's port. The £400 million Terminal 2 will not be built until "market conditions require its construction" and would double the capacity of the port.

Port of Dover chief executive Bob Goldfield, said: "This is a great day for the port and its long-term future, for our local community and for the long-term resilience of the UK economy."

➔ Fined for sewage spill

SOUTHERN Water has been fined £10,000 after admitting allowing sewage to leak into a tributary of the River Rother from its treatment works in Tenterden. It also has to pay £7,295 investigation costs and £45,000 to the Environment Agency for the clean-up bill.

Samples taken after the incident on April 1 showed the effluent being discharged from the treatment works was nearly eight times the fatal strength for fish.

➔ Festival licence move

ORGANISERS of Lounge on the Farm have surrendered their existing licence to stage the three-day music festival and will apply to Canterbury City Council a new one for the 2012 event. The move comes after police called for a review into the festival after a rise in complaints this year, which coincided with the near sell-out festival increasing its capacity to 10,000. The festival takes place at Merton Farm in Canterbury and has quickly established itself as one of the leading niche festivals in an already crowded summer marketplace.

AUTUMN STATEMENT

Osborne's words are welcomed, but now businesses want action

THIS week's Autumn Statement from Chancellor George Osborne was broadly welcomed by Kent's businesses – but they are demanding action to back up his words.

The Kent branch of the Federation of Small Businesses says many of its concerns were addressed, but some other experts say they find it hard to see beyond gloomy immediate prospects.

Roger House, FSB chairman for Kent and Medway, said: "The key now is for the Government to be consistent, and set to the task of translating these policy intentions into actions on the ground."

Mr Osborne has warned the UK faces two more years of cuts, and austerity measures could be in place for a total of six years. A total of £8 billion is due to be cut from public spending in 2015-16 and a further £7bn in 2016-17. The figures for economic growth

CHANGE: Businesses hope George Osborne's statement will be followed up with action have also been downgraded.

But one of the keys to any recovery is making it easier for small businesses to obtain credit and the Chancellor received praise in this area.

Martin Varley, partner in the corporate and commercial team at Tunbridge Wells law firm Thomson Snell & Passmore said: "Commercial banks cannot or will not provide much-needed trade finance or support for capital projects.

"The National Loan Guarantee Scheme's support for £20bn of low-rate bank lending over the next two years is a drop in the ocean. I would like to see nearer £200bn made available to guarantee loans.

"The outcome of the Chancellor's three methods of credit easing will add inflationary pressures on wages. However, stimulating the economy is essential to avoid a catastrophic fall off in demand."

And the statement heralds another year of difficult financial times, according to Sidcup-based chartered accountants and corporate finance experts McBrides Accountants LLP.

Managing partner Nick Paterno said: "There were a few crumbs of comfort in there – but not very many and the ones that there are will be hard to swallow in amongst the current plateful of doom and gloom."

INDUSTRIAL ACTION

Strike shows 'strength of feeling' over change to public sector pension

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

THOUSANDS of public sector workers joined picket lines and rallies across Kent on Wednesday in a stand against the Government's pension reforms.

But while union members hailed the industrial action a success, Prime Minister David Cameron described it as a "damp squib" despite it being the biggest strike seen in decades.

Some of Kent's MPs also criticised the industrial action, including Tory MP for South Thanet Laura Sandys who called it "badly timed".

Teachers, border staff, council workers and NHS staff such as porters, were among those to stage a walkout.

The largest march in Kent took place in Maidstone with more than 500 workers from unions including Unison and teacher union NASUWT taking part. Other rallies were staged in Canterbury, Dover and Sittingbourne.

Picket lines were also held outside council offices including Shepway and Dover, at the Port of Dover, and at the William Harvey Hospital in Ashford. And more than 300 schools were forced to close or partially close in Kent and Medway due to teacher walkouts.

Speaking at a picket line in Ashford, Zoe Van Dyke, regional organiser for Unison, said: "This is an important battle for us. Pensions are important for people who have given years of public service. Part of their package, which is not massively generous, is that they get a pension which they contribute to as well. To have the ground pulled from under their feet as they approach retirement makes them angry."

Shepway Unison committee chairman Lee Jones said the strike showed the Coalition the "strength of feeling" over the pension changes.

Kent County Council cabinet member for business strategy, performance and health reform Cllr Roger Gough, said it was "business as usual" for the vast majority of the authority's services.

"Many of Kent's 592 schools remained open, with 127 reported as fully closed and 103 partially closed," he said.

"Out of the county's 99 libraries, two closed because of the strike. So far, we have been notified that 325 of 13,000 non-school staff participated in the day of action."

KCC said it was waiting for more figures to come in before it could confirm the final total.

Cllr Gough added: "Our priority during any action of this nature, indeed at all times, is to maintain our services to the people in Kent.

UNITE: Kent saw thousands join the strike action

"I am pleased there has been a sensible approach and that we have been able to continue to provide a good level of service to people living and working in the county."

Medway Council said 41 schools closed completely and 38 partially, and five libraries had to shut for the day.

A spokeswoman added: "All essential children and adult services continued to function, as did sheltered housing."

Health chiefs at East Kent Hospitals University NHS Foundation Trust said the majority of services ran on Wednesday and key facilities were protected, including accident and emergency, critical care, and emergency surgery.

Shopping centre Bluewater reported a 20 per cent rise in footfall which was partly attributed to the strike action.

NEWS IN BRIEF

➔ Conserve water plea

THAMES Water and South East Water customers are being asked to conserve supplies after below-average rainfall for 15 of the past 19 months.

The companies, which supply Kent, said the region needs about 80 per cent of the usual winter rainfall to avoid drought measures next year.

And the Environment Agency has warned there could be a drought next summer, and water companies should start preparing now.

➔ 'Don't suffer in silence'

IN the wake of the death of Wales football manager Gary Speed, the county's health chiefs have said "no-one needs to be alone". Men aged 30-60 are the most likely to kill themselves. In 2010, out of 115 suicides in Kent and Medway, 49 were men in that age group. Support includes the free Mental Health Matters helpline offers confidential emotional support and advice, 24 hours a day, 365 days a year for people in Kent and Medway, on 0800 107 0160.

➔ Star Andre plans ahead

TICKETS to see singer Peter Andre on stage at Margate's Winter Gardens have just gone on sale at £28.50 – but you'll have to wait nearly a year before seeing him in action.

The show by the reality TV star doesn't take place until November 19, 2012, though the former husband of model Katie Price is promising to perform the hits Mysterious Girl and Behind Closed Doors, plus new material.

FOOD

Kent Crisps get bigger bags after consumers just can't get enough

THE county's latest foodie treat, Kent Crisps, has proved such a success it is to be sold in bigger bags for sharing.

The tasty snacks produced by Quex Foods have just been launched in new 150g bags to join the 40g bags, which have sold more than 300,000 packets since March.

Available from selected Waitrose, pubs, farm shops, delis, and fine food specialists, the hand-cooked crisps are made from locally-grown potatoes.

Kent Crisps reflect the tastes of the Garden of England with its flavours of Oyster and Vinegar, Ashmore Cheese and Onion, Sea Salt and Biddenden Cider Vinegar, and Sea Salt.

Quex Foods, based in Birchington, says it only uses natural flavours and colours and produces Kent Crisps using sustainable methods – an important factor for the Quex Park Estate's conservation aims.

The company's managing

director Anthony Curwen said: "It seems crisps lovers can't get enough of them and we have had constant requests for the bigger bags. We've invested in the new 150g sharing packets ahead of schedule due to overwhelming demand."

The Quex Park Estate is a 250-acre country park, with a 18th century Regency house, and the world-renowned Powell-Cotton Museum, plus other visitor attractions. It has won awards for conservation and is a haven for wildlife.

Quex Foods also makes a range of local produce, including extra virgin rapeseed oil and extra virgin sunflower oil – both grown and pressed on its farm.

Since the launch of Kent Crisps earlier this year, TV Masterchef judge John Torode has described them as "delicious", and the snack also received rave reviews across the Channel after exhibiting at the French Arras Food and Drink expo.

Waitrose has selected Kent Crisps as a locally sourced product, and is stocking them at selected stores across the county.

They were also included in the opening celebrations of the supermarket's new Canterbury store.

And British soldiers serving in Afghanistan will get to try them when a supply of Kent Crisps is sent out for Christmas, through the charity Support Our Soldiers.

FOOD AND DRINK

It's time to cast your vote to decide who offers the finest Taste of Kent

THROUGHOUT December thousands of consumers will help bring food and drink businesses across the county one step closer to winning a prestigious Taste of Kent Award 2012.

The popularity of the Taste of Kent Awards, supported by Archant KOS Media, continues to surge as thousands of consumers join Produced in Kent's search to find, nominate, and reward Kent's food and drink heroes.

So far 7,329 votes have been made at www.tasteofkentawards.co.uk, a 38 per cent per cent increase on the same time last year ahead of the public online voting deadline of Tuesday, January 3.

Produced in Kent manager Julie Monkman said: "If voting continues at this rate then the Taste of Kent Awards 2012 should see voting exceed last year's total of 10,000 votes. That's an incredible vote of confidence and shows just how much Kent's consumers care about good quality food and drink in the Garden of England."

"We are also seeing a number of new businesses engaging with the awards for the first time as producers and retailers want to be part of the county's most prestigious badge of excellence."

From beer, wine, cider/perry and fruit juice, to artisan food producer of the year, consumers have the chance to nominate their favourite dining experience in the restaurant and dining pub categories. The general public can also nominate the county's best retailers – from meat and seafood sellers, through to farmers' markets and the best all-round food retailer of the year.

Produced in Kent, organiser of the Taste of Kent Awards, is celebrating the eighth annual awards with the introduction of a prestigious Produced in Kent Award.

This will be a discretionary award presented to a person or business considered to be a true champion of local food and drink.

Ms Monkman said: "What better New Year gift could we all give Kent's best food and drink products and operators than the public honour and praise they deserve. So I'd encourage everyone to place their votes."

Following the consumer vote, the three companies/products who receive the most votes will go forward as finalists in each category to be judged by mystery shoppers, diners and an expert judging panel – ahead of the glittering awards night at Oakwood House Hotel, Maidstone, on March 2, 2012.

Demand for the Taste of Kent Awards has also seen the introduction of three self-nominating business awards. These include two Kent food product awards for the retail and foodservice categories, as well as the visionary AONB food, farming and landscape award, to recognise the contribution farmers and food producers make to the quality of our landscape.

Taste of Kent Awards has attracted a new overall sponsor – Vertex Law – while around a dozen other companies sponsor individual categories, including the AONB (Area of Outstanding Natural Beauty),

Barclays Bank, Biddenden Vineyards, Hadlow College, Kent County Council, Kent Life, Kent Frozen Foods, Quex Park Estates, NFU Mutual, Opies, Stephen's Fresh Foods, Rural Sector Solutions, Shepherd Neame, Wilkins Kennedy FKC and Visit Kent.

DEATH

MISSED: Cllr Colin Dibsall

Council is left shocked after councillor's sudden death

SEVENOAKS District Council is in mourning after the death this week of one of its longest serving councillors, Colin Dibsall.

Cllr Dibsall died on Tuesday at Darent Valley Hospital after being admitted as an emergency.

A council spokesman said: "His close family were able to be with him.

"His sudden passing was a great shock to his family and everyone at the council."

Colin Dibsall was a dedicated local councillor who was first elected to Sevenoaks District Council in 1987, to represent the Crockenhill ward, later renamed Crockenhill & Well Hill.

The Liberal Democrat also represented Crockenhill as a parish councillor. He was elected to Eynsford Parish Council in 1983, when Crockenhill was part of parish, then to Crockenhill Parish Council at its inception in 1987.

ANTIQUES

Auction success shows appeal of Tunbridge ware is growing

AUCTIONEERS selling a range of antique Tunbridge ware items have raised thousands of pounds after the hammer fell on a collection which proved a big hit with collectors.

Tunbridge ware refers to intricate marquetry wooden boxes and accessories produced during the 18th and 19th centuries as mementoes. They were sold to wealthy visitors to the popular spa town which came increasingly sophisticated.

A rare child's sewing box decorated to look like a little house (pictured) and more than 170 years old, was one of the big sellers, with an anonymous buyer snapping it up for £4,800.

Other highlights included a sewing companion in the form of a painted cottage, inscribed a 'present from Hastings' which went for £768.

Items with designs related to Brighton attracted a lot of interest with a cribbage board selling for £720, a regency Tunbridge penwork sewing box depicting Brighton selling for £1,860 and a Brighton related candle chamber stick selling for £696.

Robert Bleasdale, auctioneer and director of specialist auctioneers at Bleasdales Limited, which hosted the auction in Warwick, said: "There seems to have been a real buzz surrounding painted and penwork Tunbridge ware this year, with bidding from as far afield as Japan and Dubai.

"The desire by some collectors to own really good quality examples of Tunbridge ware is still strong and judging by the enquiries we've already had for next year's sale it looks unlikely to wane."

'Virtual' justice system could see drink drivers banned within hours

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

DRINK drivers could be banned from the road in the space of just 90 minutes after police launched a Christmas crackdown involving new virtual court technology.

Over the next month, motorists found under the influence of alcohol or drugs will be put before magistrates immediately, meaning they could lose their licence just hours after being charged.

Currently, drink drivers are bailed, allowing them to drive for a number of weeks before their case is decided.

Deputy Chief Constable Alan Pughsley said around two people are killed every week on Kent's roads, with one in six deaths involving a driver under the influence of drink or drugs.

"Our message is simple; if you are driving, stay sober and alert – or risk losing your licence," he said.

The use of virtual courts was trialled last December with 17 people appearing before a magistrate via the video network. In one case, a motorist was banned just 90 minutes after being charged.

The launch of the latest Christmas crackdown follows a visit to Kent by justice minister Nick Herbert who praised the Live Links initiative and virtual courts system, which was launched in Folkestone this week.

Live Links allows police officers to give evidence in court via the police station, allowing them to use the time they would otherwise spend waiting around and travelling to court to carry out frontline duties.

Kent Police are having to make cuts of 500 police officer posts and 1,000 civilian support staff over four years, so saving valuable time is crucial.

The Virtual Court allows a defendant charged in a police station to have their first hearing held over a secure video link to the magistrates' court.

The system has already been rolled out in Medway and will be implemented in Canterbury, Thanet and Maidstone.

Insp Bob Platt said the scheme in Kent had been a success, saving a "huge" amount of police time.

"By using Live Links the officer can either give that evidence, or be stood down, quickly and get back onto the beat and fight crime in the communities they serve," he said.

"We are now planning to extend the use of Virtual Courts and Live Links to include a facility for other types of witnesses to give evidence."

More than 1,400 people have appeared using the Virtual Court system in Kent.

Live Links was introduced in July, and in the first 24 cases more than 100 hours of police time were saved.

KOS CAMPAIGN

Cancer patient helped by campaign

By Marijke Cox

marijke.cox@archant.co.uk

A CANCER sufferer living with no heating or hot water has been thrown a lifeline by the Surviving Winter campaign.

The woman, who has breast cancer and arthritis, and her husband were identified through a project run by Macmillan Cancer Support and the Citizens Advice Bureau, which helps people with cancer who need welfare advice.

Campaigners say the couple are a perfect example of why better-off elderly people should consider 'recycling' their £200 winter fuel payment to help the less fortunate.

The Thanet couple, who asked not to be named, could not afford to install a heating system so they had struggled through last winter in bitterly cold temperatures with their grown-up son, who has learning difficulties.

When the wife was diagnosed with breast cancer earlier this year, her husband – who suffers from severe breathlessness – had to carry jugs of hot water upstairs for her to wash and hot water bottles to keep her warm.

Speaking on behalf of the couple, Macmillan CAB welfare benefit caseworker Marian Nyman said the family had faced another freezing winter until help arrived from the Archant KOS Media-backed Surviving Winter appeal.

"We managed to get Warm Front (a Government-funded scheme) to put the heating system in, but they couldn't do the plumbing," she said.

"We raised some money through Macmillan but we couldn't pay for it unless we could find the rest – it was difficult to see who could help. We heard about the Surviving Winter fund and that helped come up with the rest of the money."

Around £370 was donated from the fund and the couple are now due to have the work completed.

"They are immensely grateful and wanted to say 'thank you'," said Ms Nyman.

"They were really struggling and that had been going on for quite some time. It was only when she was diagnosed with cancer and they asked for help that something was done."

The Surviving Winter appeal, run by Kent Community Foundation, invites well-off households to donate some or all of their £200 winter fuel payment to poorer elderly and vulnerable people.

The winter fuel payment is given tax-free by the Government to every household with is a person aged 60 or over.

"A number of people have found they don't need the money and if that's the case, the Surviving Winter appeal is a good place to donate it," said Ms Nyman.

So far, a number of high profile people have donated their funds to the appeal, including former Maidstone and the Weald Tory MP Ann Widdecombe, Sir David Jason and Sir Michael Parkinson.

Sir Terry Wogan is also supporting the drive. He said: "This is an excellent way for local people to help some of the most vulnerable older people."

You can donate at www.kentcf.org.uk/surviving_winter.html.

LARGER THAN LIFE: Students from the Skinners' Kent Academy created the giant spinning wheel

Star turn goes front of house to promote this year's panto

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

A GIANT spinning wheel has been unveiled for the front of the Assembly Hall Theatre in Tunbridge Wells to mark this year's pantomime.

Created by a group of students from the Skinners' Kent Academy, it will welcome all visitors attending the theatre for the eagerly anticipated launch of Sleeping Beauty, which gets under way on December 10.

Teenagers teamed up with stage technicians at the theatre to build the wheel which will also help raise awareness of the theatre's Christmas charity - Pembury's Hospice in the Weald.

Academy principal Sian Carr said: "This project has been a wonderful chance for them to take their learning outside the classroom, learn new skills and contribute to an exciting community project."

As part of last week's unveiling, spinners from the East Sussex Guild of Weavers, Spinners & Dyers were also on hand to demonstrate and talk about the centuries old craft (pictured top left).

Sleeping Beauty features TV stars Glynis Barber, Derek Moran and Christopher Beeny and is being billed as the theatre's "most spectacular pantomime yet".

AWARDS

Dame Kelly's fury over no women on BBC shortlist

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

DAME Kelly Holmes has hit out at the BBC after the shortlist for this year's Sports Personality of the Year award was exclusively men.

The Hildenborough athlete, who memorably secured two gold medals during the Athens Olympic Games in 2004, said she was stunned when she saw the list.

Telling her followers on website Twitter, she said: "You know I'm a massive fan being a past winner BUT you have got it wrong this year. Where are the women?? Come on guys, it's 2011."

At the end of 2004, to cap her remarkable victories in both the 800m and 1,500m, Dame Kelly picked up the prestigious title, voted on by the viewing public.

Since then, only one other woman has won the title – equestrienne Zara Philips in 2006.

Other female athletes were equally as scathing at the lack of women on the list.

Triathlon world champion Chrissie Wellington said it was "disgraceful" while another double Olympic gold medalist, swimmer Rebecca

BORN WINNER: Dame Kelly after 2004 Games

Adlington, said "there have been some great women in sport this year".

The shortlist was compiled from nominations from sports editors of newspapers and magazines. Among those to make the list was Darren Clarke, who sensationally triumphed in the Open at Sandwich this summer.

The top ten are: Mark Cavendish (cycling), Darren Clarke (golf), Alastair Cook (cricket), Luke Donald (golf), Mo Farah (athletics), Dai Greene (athletics), Amir Khan (boxing), Rory McIlroy (golf), Andy Murray (tennis) and Andrew Strauss (cricket).

The winner will be selected during a live show on December 22.

'Lost' Henry VIII dockyard uncovered by funnyman on Tudor television dig

By Chris Britcher

chris.britcher@archant.co.uk

THE first evidence confirming the site of Henry VIII's dockyard in Kent has been uncovered by comedian Rory McGrath during a search for Medway's hidden Tudor shipyard.

The discoveries, which included medieval relics and evidence of a huge storehouse, were made as he filmed for a new television series.

McGrath and a team of archaeologists spent four days carrying out the first-ever search for the original dockyard on the banks of the River Medway.

This area had never been explored before and the team, working for Oxford Scientific Films, uncovered the evidence that proved this was the site of some of the earliest shipyards.

The evidence uncovered included a ship's hook, nails and tankards used by Tudor ship builders from the time of King Henry VIII.

They also found the foundations of a vast Georgian building that would have been filled with the cannon that armed ships including Nelson's Victory.

Pub Dig is being shown on the History Channel and the second programme features Chatham's Command House pub, which was once the headquarters for the Storekeeper of Ordnance, who was responsible for all naval armaments.

Paul Blinkhorn, field archae-

UNCOVERED: Rory McGrath and Paul Blinkhorn, and Henry VIII

ologist on the project, said: "Digging at the Chatham Dockyard was, as an archaeologist, both a thrill and a privilege."

"To be able to carry out the first formal excavations on a site of such global importance was certainly an experience I shall never forget, and the results were better than we could have dared to hope."

The manager of the Command House, Keith Stephen, added: "I have always wanted to find out more about the history of the place and this has given me the chance to do that."

Medway Council leader Cllr Rodney Chambers, said: "We are delighted this team has made such significant discoveries, which have helped increase our understanding of Medway's great maritime heritage. We hope this will help draw even more attention to our bid for World Heritage Status for the dockyard and defences at Chatham."

Chatham is the world's most complete example of an historic dockyard from the age of sail and early age of steam (1700-1865) and was instrumental in securing and maintaining Britain's international influence, leading the world in industrial design, naval architecture and military technology.

The UK can propose one World Heritage Site a year. Chatham Dockyard and its Defences is on the Government's shortlist of 11 sites for nominations. The next available application date is January, 2013.

Eight arrests as reward offered in police hunt for cashpoint ramraiders

By Ed Hill

ed.hill@archant.co.uk

EIGHT men were arrested this week as a £25,000 reward was put up to help catch ramraiders targeting cash machines.

The money is being put up by LINK cash machine scheme.

It follows a series of raids over six days in November. Police are investigating whether the raids are linked.

Three men had previously been arrested. And on Tuesday eight men, ranging in age from 18 to 30 were arrested in Sevenoaks, Longfield, Gravesend, Orpington, and Maidstone.

All were released on bail.

On November 16 thieves used a JCB digger, stolen from a building site, to rip a cash machine from the wall of the Waitrose store in St Bernard Paget Avenue, Ashford.

Then on November 19 a

THEFT: Three ATM raids took place during six days in November gang attempted to steal a cash machine from the NatWest Bank in High Street, Snodland, and on November 22 thieves stole a cash machine from the Co-op store in Newington High Street, near Sittingbourne.

A dedicated hotline number has been set up by the investigation team for people to call.

Det Chief Insp Keith Davies of the Kent and Essex Serious Crime Directorate, said: "The reward being put on offer by the LINK Scheme is a substantial amount and I would urge anyone with information to call the hotline – we will treat calls in the strictest confidence.

"The public can also help police by calling 999 if they see any unusual movement of diggers and similar plant machinery at night or people acting suspiciously near banks or shops with cash machines."

Anyone with information can call the hotline on 01622 652494 or Kent Crimestoppers on 0800 555111.

KENT REMEMBERED

MIRROR: An almost intact 'concrete listening ear' can be found along the coast from Hythe

MoD's concrete 'ears'

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

EXAMPLES of an almost forgotten military technology that was developed in the late 1920s and early 1930s still exist along the Kent coast to the west of Hythe and out onto Romney Marsh.

Concrete acoustic mirrors were devised in the aftermath of the Zeppelin and Gotha bomber raids of World War One to provide an early warning system in the event of aerial attacks in any future conflict.

But the development of radar meant they were never used – even though they were sensitive enough to pick up the sound of the Golden Arrow train leaving Calais station.

Also known as 'concrete listening ears', one survives – although it is fenced off – a couple of miles down the coast from Hythe. Another closer to the town has fallen into ruin with just rubble remaining.

Both can easily be reached on foot via a path which leads up the cliff. Near to the (mostly) intact mirror is a derelict building dating from the same period which would most likely have acted as quarters and a base for spotters manning the device.

Further examples of the listening ears still exist at Denge, where there is also a large concrete wall which was designed to provide a similar function.

Other sites can be found near to Selsey Bill, Sunderland, Redcar and Kilnsea in the UK, as well as at Bahar on the island of Malta.

The acoustic mirror programme was the brainchild of Dr William Sansome Tucker, who was director of acoustical research at the Air Defence Experimental Establishment at Biggin Hill.

His devices were designed to pick up the engine noises of approaching enemy aircraft as sound waves were caught in the belly of the mirror and relayed back through microphones and a stethoscope to an operator.

The mirrors worked by concentrating sound waves towards a central point, where the microphone would have been located.

However, their use was limited as aircraft became faster and so would have been over the coast before effective action could have been taken.

Operators also found it difficult to distinguish between aircraft and shipping.

But the programme was not an entire waste of time and effort.

The system which had been designed to link the mirrors and the operators and plot the movements of incoming aircraft was taken on by the radar teams and so played a part in the defeat of the Luftwaffe in the skies over southern England in 1940.

OPINION

Help us stop winter deaths

Carol Lynch, chief executive of Kent Community Foundation, explains the need to 'recycle' Winter Fuel Payments to help those who are most in need

EACH year there are more than 1,000 excess winter deaths in Kent and Medway, with cold weather exacerbating coronary and respiratory illnesses.

For every winter-related death, there will be dozens suffering, facing a difficult choice between eating and heating, becoming isolated and withdrawn from their community.

Nearly five and a half million households are living in fuel poverty nationwide, with more than 76,500 households in Kent and Medway. Almost half of those living in fuel poverty are aged over 60.

With soaring fuel bills and the prospect of another cold winter, older people are at risk of plunging into fuel poverty.

Surviving Winter is a UK-wide co-ordinated campaign encouraging people to make donations to help older and vulnerable people suffering from fuel poverty this winter.

The campaign was inspired by people who wanted to donate their Government Winter Fuel Payment to help elderly people in real need.

The Winter Fuel Payment is a universal benefit, which means everyone over 60 receives it regardless of their personal circumstances.

This is the first time Surviving Winter has been run in Kent, although other Community Foundations ran it in other counties last winter with great success.

Of course, not everyone over 60 will be in a position to 'recycle' their Winter Fuel Payment in this way and Kent Community Foundation supports anyone who needs the payment to hold on to it and make sure they keep themselves warm.

Opinion is divided on the notion of universal benefits, but there is no political agenda behind this campaign. Our view is that providing a channel for people to help others is 'policy neutral'. Means-testing can be costly and we know one-in-three pensioners do not claim all the benefits they are entitled to. We come at this from the stance that it makes sense to enable those who can afford to, to 'recycle' their payment to pensioners in real need.

As a Community Foundation, we can ensure that any money donated is directed where it is needed.

We work with hundreds of local groups who are able to identify those individuals who need extra support, such as help with fuel bills, hot meals, lunch clubs, transport schemes, and advice on keeping warm.

Kent Community Foundation tries not to compete with local charities. Indeed Community Foundations exist, above all, to address the growing 'Tescoisation' of the charitable

Nearly five-and-a-half million homes are living in fuel poverty sector, where the big get bigger through slick, effective fundraising operations, while the small charities often wither.

Community Foundations do this by encouraging local people to give money to small community charities precisely because we believe they are often very efficient and effective at what they do.

If people are already giving their Winter Fuel Payment to a local group, or if they know of a project they want to support, then we would encourage them to do so.

There are many others who would like their money to go to older people within the county, but may not know where they are. With our 10 years' experience connecting local donors with local causes, that's where our expertise lies.

Bumpy journey ahead for the new airport

WHILE KCC leader Paul Carter's idea to locate a new airport across the Thames in Thurrock may seem appealing, the location he's pinpointed is actually a lot closer than people may think to the potential Kent sites.

Although moving the location to Essex would mean protection for a internationally-important wildlife site on the north Kent coast, there would still be the noise of planes flying overhead to contend with.

So, while avoiding an airport on our doorstep is a positive, we would still have some noise, and even perhaps miss out on first pick for the new jobs.

Fresh treasures from our glorious history

WE ALL know Kent is steeped in history, so it doesn't always come as a surprise when yet more treasure is uncovered. This doesn't mean, however, the latest discovery confirming Henry VIII's dockyard is any less exciting.

It just shows once again the crucial role the county has played in British history.

End the heat or eat dilemma

A COUPLE of items from your last weekend's edition need commenting on.

Firstly, as the Government recently gave many millions of pounds of our money to help the starving in East Africa, will they now reinstate that part of the Winter Fuel Allowance they callously took away after getting into office, so the elderly, infirm and less well off in this country don't have to choose between 'heat or eat'?

Secondly with water companies asking us to be careful with water use, isn't it about time the Government put a stop to foreign owned companies like Coca Cola and all the others that waste countless billions and billions of gallons of water producing all those rubbish drinks?

Football's alive and kicking

I AM writing to express my concerns and utter contempt for a blog that you published regarding non-league football on the Isle of Sheppey, dated November 4.

The blog from the start appeared to be close to slanderous towards the people of the Isle of Sheppey with its references to the 'gene pool' and that we have got 'six toes' to control a football, and the appalling jibe at Rod Hull which I am sure his family would like to have read.

The football facts! Can we ask that the full facts of what is going on in our neck of the woods is fully researched before going to press as the slurs Mr Atkins feels fit to put on the island are outdated.

I will update you on a few facts about the state of football on the Isle of Sheppey.

The folded Sheppey United that Mr Atkins refers to is now re-instated. If he were to bother to check FA records Sheppey United are affiliated to the Kent Football Association as an Intermediate Club alongside Sheerness East.

The club are only a division below the current East side and by the way this season is going (only one loss) they will be in the same division next season and the growth will continue.

They now have a new home which a new committee are working hard to recoup finances and plans are being made for a long term future for Sheppey United FC.

Mr Atkins goes on about producing players of quality. Did he know or did he care that we have a number of players who come from Sheppey and are playing for clubs in the Kent League, the Kent Invicta League, Ryman League, Blue Square League and Barclays Premier League.

Remember Chris Smalling, Fred? He came from the Isle of Sheppey and top referee Gavin Ward, that name was missed from the blog as well.

All of this football that is so badly needed for the Island has to come from the bottom. I think Mr Atkins would agree that. Let's look at the grassroots situation on the island.

We have a great youth set up on the island with Sheerness East, Range Rovers and New Road FC all running sides from ages 7-18 years and encouraging hundreds if not thousands of kids to play on and around the island.

The move into the junior adult game that is based in and around the island is in such a poor state that the local league that has been established since 1966 is still going strong. It boasts nearly a thousand players alone this season, it runs its own youth league, it's actively involved in new FA schemes such as the introduction of Futsal, and boasts three qualified officials on 90 per cent of all of its matches. The future is so bleak for the Isle of Sheppey!

Whoops, sorry nearly forgot. I do believe that the Sheppey Sunday Football League were the first winners of the FA National Respect Award for the Best Grassroots League in 2009-10 and were highly commended in the 2010-11 season...

Yes, Mr Atkins, that was a national award and it was the Isle of Sheppey Sunday League.

The very island that football has no future on, if you believe Mr Atkins.

Can I personally thank everyone who gets involved in the game that is making great strides in the area, the game in Sheppey is alive – very much alive.

Give us carols in full please

HERE is my request for all the churches and choirs preparing their Christmas programmes.

Please can you perform all carols complete and in their original form? My reason is as follows.

Most texts follow their own unique structure. The six verses of The First Nowell, for example, seem to convey the coming together of the Wise Men and Shepherds. Ultimately, this symbolises the union of east and west, summed up in the glorious line "then let us all with one accord".

Performances of this beautiful English folk song are often given without the Wise Men verses. Here the structure and message of the complete text are destroyed.

I have even heard it sung with the first two verses followed by verse five. Here a performance goes straight from the shepherds to say "then entered in those wise men three". As the Wise Men have not yet been mentioned, the 'abridged' text makes no sense. The poetry is ruined.

The argument that repeating a tune so many times is boring to an audience falls flat when considering the number of classical favourites that do just that. Ravel's Bolero is the best example.

Robert Duncan Martin

How can we buy homes?

LAST week the Prime Minister said he wanted more young families to experience the sense of ownership, pride and independence that comes with home ownership.

That's a great sentiment but people in my home town of Dartford must be gasping in incomprehension at the gap between his vision and the reality.

The Tory-led government has slashed the budget for new affordable homes by 60 per cent. Housebuilding is down, homelessness is up, people can't get mortgages and rents are soaring.

When the Prime Minister was making his dreamy statement, presumably he was aware the average mortgage deposit size in October was 40 per cent – unaffordable to most. He must also know that housing completions in the South East have fallen over eight per cent in just the third quarter of this year.

Dartford residents are especially aware of the diminishing supply of homes – they know that most existing projects have largely stalled and that almost no new affordable housing is being built.

We face a housing crisis and people in Dartford, and in Kent generally, won't forgive being served up nothing more than fine words by this government on housing. They may also remember that the party that delivers homes isn't the Tories at all – under Labour two million new homes were built in England between 1997 and 2010; half a million of which were affordable homes. When it comes to the roof over one's head, actions speak louder than David Cameron's words.

Autumn Statement: 'Key task now is for consistent action'

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

THE Kent and Medway branch of the Federation of Small Businesses (FSB) has welcomed the Chancellor's Autumn Statement, saying it is a step in the right direction to help small firms that are central to economic growth and job creation in the UK.

George Osborne has admitted that the Government will have to borrow £111 billion more than expected by 2016 due to the lack of economic growth.

Unemployment is also expected to peak at 2.8 million next year.

But the FSB says it is pleased the Government has enhanced the seed enterprise investment scheme, which will offer greater relief on capital gains and income tax for people investing in small businesses. This will give start-ups and fledgling businesses the chance to bypass the high-street banks and find alternative sources of finance.

Extra funds for small businesses through the credit-easing scheme are also welcomed by the FSB. It should help to decrease the cost of finance for small firms and will hopefully increase the amount of lending to small businesses – especially with today's figures from the Bank of England showing that lending fell in the last three months.

However, the FSB has concerns that guaranteeing the loan books of existing high-street banks may serve to reinforce their market position. The Government must therefore go further to promote the emergence of alternative forms of finance and greater competition in the banking sector, it says.

Measures to reduce the risk of taking on new staff and increase job creation are welcomed and an overhaul of the tribunal system is also a step in the right direction, claims the FSB.

But with youth unemployment rising to record levels, the Chancellor needs to be more ambitious in incentivising job creation by extending schemes like Work Trials to prevent unemployment becoming entrenched, according to the FSB, which welcomed attempts to tackle firms' rising overheads.

Based on September's inflation figure, businesses would have seen a 10 per cent increase in their business rates over the last two years. An extension to small-business rates relief will be welcomed by many small high-street businesses as a way to help manage overheads.

Deferring January's fuel-duty increase is welcomed, too, but a three-pence rise is still coming and will hit small firms and households in August. The FSB is calling for a longer-term solution that not only takes the volatility out of fuel prices but the politics as well. Small businesses need to be able to know what their overheads will be in six months' time and that is why the FSB is calling for a true fuel-duty stabiliser mechanism.

Plans to improve the country's transport network have been welcomed. While improvements could help small businesses, it is also vital that small firms are given the chance to win these and other public procurement contracts.

Roger House, FSB chairman for Kent and Medway, said: "The announcements in the Autumn Statement address many of the concerns raised by small businesses and are therefore to be welcomed.

"The key now is for the Government to be consistent and set to the task of translating these policy intentions into tangible actions on the ground.

"Targeting the rising cost of overheads is imperative to help firms weather the economic storm that could be heading our way, so measures to limit the rise in fuel prices and business rates are very welcome.

"Small businesses are struggling to access finance and so the enterprise investment scheme will open up new sources of finance for new and growing businesses. We hope the banks will pass on the lower interest rates to small businesses and that more finance will be available."

Nicholas Leeming, business development director at Zoopla.co.uk, commented on the statement's possible effect on the property market.

He said: "It's now Plan B for the first-time-buyer market. The stamp-duty holiday has been scrapped because it was not deemed to be doing enough to boost buyer numbers and instead the Government is focusing on underwriting loans for first-time buyers and boosting affordable-housing supply.

"But these plans should not be mutually exclusive. If the Government is serious about helping people get on to the housing ladder, then underwriting loans and increasing supply should have been introduced to support the stamp-duty holiday, not replace it.

"We're in danger of house-builders and lenders cherry-picking the schemes that suit them rather than the market, which could leave us in exactly the same position in 12 months' time."

Hotel group tops carbon reduction league table

QHOTELS, the award-winning collection of 21 four-star hotels across the UK, which includes Ashford International, has been named top hotel group in the first Carbon Reduction Commitment (CRC) League Table.

This makes it second out of all hospitality companies ranked in the league and 30th out of more than 2,000 UK organisations ranked.

The CRC league table measures the performance of organisations that fall under the CRC Energy Efficiency Scheme and aims to provide a strong financial and reputational incentive for participants to reduce energy consumption and CO2 emissions.

Hotel group managing director Michael Purtil said: "This ranking is a superb recognition of our commitment to CO2 and energy management.

"Measures to improve our carbon efficiency have included retro-fitting low-energy lamps, pipe and roof insulation, air-conditioning timers, PIR-controlled lighting, water-flow regulators for showers and digital gas meters that can record consumption every half hour.

"We have saved more than 2,747 tonnes of CO2 in just one year – and we're looking to improve on that year-on-year."

CONFERENCE

Trade meeting focuses on red tape as MP listens to concerns of SMEs

BUSINESS secretary Vince Cable addressed an audience of Kent's commercial directors at a trade community conference in Leeds Castle on Sunday.

The MP focused on the need to minimise the 'red tape' that businesses have to go through in day-to-day trading.

The managing director for Kent's Perfectly Clear Marketing, Bruce Bell, was impressed with what the MP had to say.

The Sittingbourne businessman said: "Mr Cable was very much in a listening mood, which was nice to see. He wanted to take feedback from the floor.

"It was all about trying to have more support for businesses in various guises and knocking down the red tape and ensuring we were more free than we currently are to do our business"

Mr Cable spoke to the Kent Institute of Directors, whose members provided scenarios from their business background and problems they faced in the current climate.

Mr Bell also takes up the voluntary role of chairing the events and marketing committee for Kent IoD.

He said: "On banking, he was saying there is going to be funding support for SMEs to borrow more freely.

"It was a supportive message, he was open and honest, and he struck many in the room as someone who was actually listening.

"It was a positive meeting – on finding different solutions on the employment front and the banking front and the unblocking of red tape. That is what they are trying to do."

Historic brewer wins European recognition for its supply chain

SHEPHERD Neame has been named Team Of The Year in the European Supply Chain Excellence Awards 2011, beating multinational corporations such as Coca Cola and Vodafone.

The Faversham brewery was praised for its enthusiasm, passion and commitment to customer service and improvements to the supply chain.

Recent initiatives have helped increase capacity, reduce costs and improve product availability to meet higher demand and expectations from customers.

Tom Falcon, production and distribution director, said: "This win reflects the commitment and hard work of the whole team and the dedication they have shown in driving up product availability and customer satisfaction."

"We will continue to look for ways to improve our supply chain and to make it even more efficient."

The European Supply Chain Excellence Awards were launched in 1997 as an initiative to recognise and reward organisations in Europe that demonstrate excellence in their supply chain operations. They are renowned for the rigour of the judging process.

Britain's oldest brewer, Shepherd Neame was also recognised for supply-chain improvements at the Manufacturer of the Year Awards 2010 and awarded Best Improvement Project at the Process Excellence Awards 2010.

Contract signed for college construction

BAM Construction in the South East has secured an £18 million contract to design and build the new facilities for K College at its campus at Elwick Road, Ashford

K College is the largest college in Kent and has a number of campuses, including those in Tonbridge and Folkestone.

BAM will provide general-purpose teaching accommodation, a new technology centre, support services and landscaping. The architects are HNW. The site has been out of use for a number of years.

BAM has an extensive track record in Kent, especially in the education sector, having recently completed two campuses for North West Kent College in Dartford and Gravesend, and it is currently working at a preparatory school in Tonbridge called Hilden Grange.

The company is also close to completing the Bluewater Events Venue in Dartford, having also delivered the Whitefriars scheme in Canterbury just a few years ago.

Internet sales help coast town's economy to grow

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

DOVER has one of the fastest-growing economies in the UK when it comes to business being done online.

It is 19th in the country when it comes to internet-generated commerce with about 23 per cent growth from 2010 to 2011.

Top was Scunthorpe with 47.2 per cent, while Dover was the only Kent town in the top 20.

To compile this list, Google short-listed the 700 towns with the highest online economic activity and then ranked them in terms of the percentage increase in local small and medium-sized enterprises using AdWords over the last year.

Figures from industry analyst the Boston Consulting Group show that companies with an online presence grow at a rate four to eight times faster than those without.

Ben Lawson, manager of Britannia Coaches, which started 20 years ago, provides coaches for hire in Dover, all from the company's website. He said: "We celebrated 20 years of our business this year and have been online for nearly half of that."

"I started a big online push early last year and now do more and more of my marketing online because you can target specific groups of people and you can measure your investment. We noticed a 60 per cent increase in customers since using AdWords and I have already recommended it to friends and family with businesses. It's been a great factor in the company's success."

Google has now awarded Dover the status of an eTown.

Dan Cobley, managing director of Google UK, said: "Dover has much to be proud of, with local business-owners turning to online opportunities to drive growth and boost their bottom lines."

"The internet is contributing massively towards the overall UK economy and we want to encourage and help more small businesses to get online and succeed online."

In recognition of Dover's eTown status and to encourage other small and medium-sized enterprises to join the growing success of online com-

Charlie Elphicke, MP for Dover and Deal, said: "Dover is proud of its Google eTown award and I am delighted to represent an area with such a

Showcase your destination to the county and benefit from some lasting publicity

By Nick Ames

nick.ames@archant.co.uk

PROPRIETORS of the county's visitor attractions are being invited to sign up for My Kent Big Weekend 2012 – the county's annual celebration of its tourism industry and the range of venues that entertain more than 56.6 million people every year.

My Kent Big Weekend 2012, showcasing the best of the county's tourism, leisure and hospitality businesses to thousands of residents, will be held on Saturday and Sunday, March 17-18.

The weekend of Kent entertainment will also mark the end of the first England Tourism Week highlighting the importance of the industry to the national economy.

Plans are already in hand to ensure My Kent Big Weekend 2012 is the biggest and best to date, with even more destinations and venues taking part and more free tickets for people to explore new places and experiences on their doorstep.

Plus the organisers at Visit Kent, the county's tourism champions, are working with their colleagues in the Nord Pas de Calais and cross-Channel providers Eurolines and Eurotunnel to enable a number of the county's residents to enjoy a day visiting attractions in France and vice-versa.

Destinations- and event-organisers taking part in the My Kent Big Weekend are asked to offer a number of free tickets for county residents to visit their venues over the weekend.

Photographs and details of the attraction or event are then placed on the bespoke My Kent Big Weekend website which residents can browse before putting in requests for free tickets. Once the website closes, tickets are allocated on a ballot system.

Even when ticket applications have closed, the website remains open for viewing until after the event so that people can take another look at the many attractions taking part.

"Six years ago we launched the Kent Big Day Out and it has exceeded all our

IN THE LIGHT: Sandra Matthews-Marsh is urging attractions like Leeds Castle, above, to put themselves forward for next year's My Big Kent Weekend event the attractions and experiences that Kent has to offer, going far beyond our iconic castles, cathedrals and historic houses to include many hidden gems such as art galleries, theatres, museums, sporting venues, creative experiences and even the centre of a village.

"This year we were able to give away 18,000 free tickets to 120 venues and I am optimistic that in 2012 more businesses will be able to take part and share in the fun and the long-term marketing benefits that this event offers.

expectations," said Sandra Matthews-Marsh, chief executive at Visit Kent.

"This year we took the event over two days and received more than 51,000 applications for tickets during the month that the website was open. On average, people spent nine minutes browsing 25 pages of the site, and there were more than 812,000 page views during the ticket application period.

"It is a tremendous showcase for all

"Our research shows more than 85 per cent of attractions taking part in 2011 thought it was an excellent event for them and, in total, participating attractions received more than £150,000 in secondary spend.

"Furthermore, 80 per cent of residents with free tickets said they would revisit the attraction they went to, while a staggering 98 per cent said they would be recommending it to their friends and family."

The aim of the My Kent Big Weekend campaign is to raise local awareness of the wealth of businesses in Kent that entertain visitors and contribute more than £3.2 billion annually to the county's economy.

"Kent and Medway have so much to offer, but when we are leading busy lives it is easy to lose touch with all the new destinations and developments," said Mrs Matthews-Marsh.

"My Kent Big Weekend gives us all a chance to go out and explore them for ourselves. Then, when we are entertaining friends and relatives or meet visitors in our area, we will be much better informed and able to tell them all about the places they can discover and enjoy during their stay.

"This will be particularly important in 2012, when we will be hosting so many people from across the UK and overseas keen to soak up the atmosphere of the London Games celebrations, Cultural Olympiad and Dickens Bicentenary."

CAMPAIGN

MP supports newsagents

SITTINGBOURNE and Sheppey MP Gordon Henderson has written to Jeremy Hunt, Secretary of State for Culture, Media and Sport, in support of the National Federation of Retail Newsagents' Press For Reform campaign.

A petition, signed by 20,000 customers of independent newsagents and convenience stores across the UK over the course of three weeks, was delivered to 10 Downing Street by more than 100 retailers from England, Northern Ireland, Scotland and Wales.

The petition calls for the OFT to refer the newspaper and magazine industry to the Competition Commission for a full market investigation.

Retailers believe the very existence of independent news-sellers is threatened by the monopoly of the two remaining wholesale distributors and a few powerful publishers who control the supply and retail selling prices.

Small retailers say they could face arbitrary delivery charge hikes, alongside simultaneous margin cuts and frequent poor service, which adversely affects customer choice of when and where they can buy products.

Currently, the industry has no effective regulation and the campaign calls for this to be investigated by the Competition Commission.

Mr Henderson said: "Our small independent newsagents are an important part of our community and I am delighted to back the Press For Reform campaign."

Mum's the word as businesswoman short-listed for national award

A MOTHER and businesswoman has been named as a finalist for a national award.

Stephanie Hayman, from Deal, has been selected as a finalist in the prestigious NatWest Everywoman Awards, which recognises female role models and entrepreneurs who have created sustainable social businesses.

In 2006, Hayman conceived of and led the creation of Whole School Meals, a social enterprise that provides high-quality school meals to children across east Kent, all managed from headquarters in Deal.

After winning its first contract in 2006, Whole School Meals now serves 24 schools and is 75 per cent owned by 18 local schools.

The company's purpose is to provide nourishing, appetising meals using high-quality fresh ingredients supplied by local, independent suppliers and using as much Kentish produce as possible.

Hayman, now chair of Whole School Meals, said about her selection as a finalist: "I am delighted that this national competition recognises all our hard work here in east Kent and the unique enterprise we have created together.

"I was appalled by the quality of school meals our children received prior to 2006, but I could envision a much better alternative to the industrial-style food that was being served.

"By creating Whole School Meals as a community-owned business, we have transformed the quality of school lunches and can proudly claim to be in the business of nourishing children.

"The directors and staff team at Whole School Meals are dedicated to providing tasty, appetising meals and have put in a tremendous amount of work to help create this unique and inspiring social enterprise.

"There has been interest in our model from all over the country and I am keen now to take our approach to other communities so they can take control of their local school-meals service and ensure it meets the high standards we all want for our children and grandchildren."

The winners will be announced at a lunch ceremony at London's Dorchester Hotel on Wednesday, December 7.

Energy firm proud of perfect record

RENEWABLE energy expert Enevis has a perfect apprentice track record – having retained the services of 100 per cent of its graduates.

The Dartford-based business has taken on an average of four apprentices each year since 2001 and every one of these young recruits remains on the company payroll.

The Enevis apprentices are enrolled on either a mechanical or electrical course, with one day per week spent at college and the other four on site. The courses take between three and four years to complete.

Enevis human resources advisor Berni Halse said the nature of the renewables industry made the company's long-term commitment to education and its future workforce vital.

"A solid background in either mechanical or electrical engineering is crucial to work on any renewables project we offer, be it fitting a solar photovoltaic system or installing a ground source heat pump," she said.

"By taking on these apprentices, many of whom come from the local area, we are supporting Dartford, something which is core to Enevis' principles."

Students showing off business skills

HAIR curling, massages and even holidays were offered by MidKent College students to shoppers at Chatham's Docks Factory Outlet.

Youngsters on courses run by the Services to People faculty set up stands at the retail destination to promote the wide range of services available to the public.

These include fine dining restaurants, a travel agency, and a hair and beauty salon all run by college students.

Hair and beauty technician Norna Squires, who organised the event, said: "A lot of people don't realise our students run businesses from the college, so we visited Docks in the hope of drawing more of the public in."

"The stands attracted a lot of attention throughout the day and it was good for our young people to demonstrate what they have to offer."

The Services to People faculty covers courses in hair and beauty, hospitality and catering, and travel and tourism.

Building blocks for a career in construction

A £4 million housing development of flats in Rusthall has given more than 100 young people an insight into the construction industry.

The Town & Country Housing Group project at Simmonds Court provides 27 two-bedroom flats and six, one-bedroom flats.

During its development a skills centre, run by Denne Construction Company, was established on site to allow young people to get hands-on experience in construction.

The project was one of the first in the country to pilot the Homes and Community Agency's employment and skills guidance, to help housing providers put into practice employment and skills activities on their projects.

Achievements of the skills centre included:

- Denne staff spent an afternoon with six trainees at the Ridgeway Skills Centre in Southborough to discuss issues about getting work in the construction industry, with a view to a possible placement at the Simmonds Court project.

- Denne worked with K College in Tonbridge to identify local students who wanted to become plumbing or carpentry apprentices. After identifying a number of possible candidates, interviews were carried out and three plumbing candidates and two carpentry candidates were invited to undertake work experience placements. This involved each student working on site for a week during five separate placements. At the end of the placements two plumbing apprenticeships and two carpentry apprenticeships were awarded.

- An enterprise day, featuring construction and civil engineering, was delivered to 160 pupils from Year 10 at Hayesbrook School. They took part in a series of hands-on workshops throughout the day.

- Year 9 students at Hayesbrook School took part in a construction challenge workshop, competing to build the highest tower in the least amount of time using the fewest bricks. The challenge involved planning a construction strategy, and incorporating material costs and time delays.

- Twelve students from Hayesbrook School also visited the Denne construction site as part of school engagement activities.

They got a safety induction and learnt about careers in construction, a workshop on how Denne is working with Town & Country to build the housing in Rusthall, and brick laying contractor Maybrooks Bricklaying was on hand to answer students' questions and gave all the students a bricklaying demonstration.

- Denne made an arrangement with MidKent College for one student, studying towards a foundation degree in construction, to have a work placement on the Simmonds Court Site.

Town & Country's development director Colin Lissenden said: "I am delighted we could work in partnership with Denne to run this Skills Centre and give over 100 young people an insight into the construction industry and for many a first taste of what it would be like to work in such an environment."

Pupils give teachers a lesson in the digital revolution

STUDENTS are being encouraged to help extend the use of technology in the classroom.

A team of 'Digital Leaders' has been created at The Charles Dickens School in Broadstairs to have their say in what happens with IT throughout the school's learning programme.

It gives students the chance to make a difference to their education by observing how lessons are taught and suggesting ways that learning could become more appealing and effective through digital technology.

Following an introductory workshop at the University of Kent, eight students are now working with a range of programmes including Prezi which is a new look at how to stage Powerpoint presentations, Wordle which is used in English, and Pixton which enables comic storyboards to be created on screen to illustrate and impart information.

Marnie Gander and Ellen Berry-McIntosh, both 14, are Digital Leaders. Marnie said: "Working from textbooks can be a bit boring. Using digital resources makes learning more exciting and more relevant to students who use digital communica-

"It will help teachers put together lessons in a way that is more engaging for us. The message is 'don't be a digital dinosaur'."

Ellen added: "We used Pixton to create a comic strip to deliver topics in health and safety. It was fun, creative and we enjoyed learning. You can also log onto the internet to finish your work at home so it encourages you to do more."

Lee Sennett, director of E-learning at the school, said: "This project benefits students and teachers and is an innovative way to teach and learn. It produces stimulating lessons."

Headteacher Andrew Olsson said: "It is a great idea that puts teachers at the other end of learning through student evaluation and input, and also enables students to see their lesson content and delivery from a different perspective."

New qualification helps students prepare for university and work

STUDENTS at Canterbury's Simon Langton Girls' Grammar School Sixth Form are being offered the chance to add a new qualification to their bow, with the launch of the AQA Bacca-laureate (AQA Bac).

The AQA Bac is an academic qualification comprising three A-levels, independent learning through the Extended Project Qualification (EPQ), personal development through activities such as work-related learning or community participation, and personal development through an AS level in critical thinking.

Assistant headteacher Mark Perrian said: "The AQA Bac has been launched at SLGGS to ensure the education of our students doesn't just cater for their academic success but also equips them for the challenges that their future careers will hold."

"The school hopes this extra qualification will show universities and employers our students are talented and capable of smooth progression to higher education and the world of work."

The introduction of the AQA Bac is the beginning of a process at the school. "We have students who enter just about every profession and career. We have to look for ways to ensure they can prepare for that diversity and can further those skills that make them better students, but also better citizens. We want students to feel it's the success they achieve in all areas of their sixth form experience that will help them in their next steps" said Mr Perrian.

THE INTERVIEW

Let's make a song and dance about Christmas

MUSICIAN Bob Drury is set to perform at six venues across Kent this festive season as he takes his A Crooner's Christmas show on the road, writes Nick Ames.

Drury, who has performed as a solo singer-guitarist and band leader and also runs his own Neil Diamond show, will be accompanied by members of his family, including daughters Cleo and Harriet.

He will be performing traditional, popular and modern Christmas numbers to appeal to as wide an audience as possible.

Drury, who lives in Seabrook, said: "Every year I found myself harping on that 'Christmas is just not what it used to be...' This year I thought it was about time I got off the fence and tried to do something about it.

"This performance is about people's memories of the Christmases they enjoyed in their younger days in the main – although the show will have plenty for younger people as well.

"But Christmas past is certainly a theme. I want to trigger the associations of my audience with times gone by."

The first half of his set will involve a mock-up of his lounge with musical accompaniment as children get ready for Christmas. Special guests will come on to the stage amid the festivities to perform, along with dancers.

The second half of the show will see songs from the 1960s to the present day performed.

"I've been in the business for years," said Drury. "But this came about after a show I played a couple of years ago at a restaurant in Hythe. I performed some numbers in the Dean Martin and Bing Crosby style and they went down really well. Everyone was singing along and so I thought I would turn the concept into a theatrical show.

"I want to appeal to as wide a range of people as possible so we have songs from the traditional crooner's repertoire and then popular seasonal hits such as songs by Slade and Mike Oldfield. To bring it right up to date, there is a number from Adele.

"We have a special appearance by Rudy the Rude Boy Reindeer who is a delinquent teenager trying to mess up Santa's plans. He has his own song, sung to the well-known Rudolph tune. That's one for the younger audience members."

Drury's eldest daughter Cleo, who manages the local Age Concern facilities, is arranging the dancing for the show.

"I've had quite a bit of experience performing," she said. "And I still keep my hand in. One thing I do is organise shows for the clients who I am involved with at Age Concern. It's great to be able to bring people in and connect the young and the old."

Her young sister Harriet is also in the show – performing some songs and currently juggling rehearsal time with that of the Folkestone pantomime in which she also performs.

Drury has an extensive background in music; originally working extensively after teaching himself, he went on to study classical guitar at Canterbury Christ Church University College.

He graduated with a masters degree in music performance in 1999 and has since performed at many events including music festivals, weddings, special dinners and restaurant theme evenings.

Back in 2007 he launched his solo Neil Diamond tribute show, A Diamond Experience,

Picture PAUL JERRETT

TOGETHER: Rudy the Rude Boy Reindeer is to perform with Bob Drury, along with Harriet and Davina

– possibly his most popular act with numbers such as Cracklin' Rosie and Sweet Caroline. The show has been performed at venues throughout the UK and on Mediterranean cruises.

And in his one-man show, A Swing Thing, Drury performs a selection of songs made famous by Frank Sinatra, Dean Martin, Bobby Darin, Nat King Cole, Matt Monro, Michael Bublé, Jamie Cullum, Sammy Davies Junior, Duke Ellington, Tony Bennett, Neil Diamond and Roger Miller.

He said: "I remember secretly listening to the BBC's Light programme at night on an old valve radio that had belonged to my grandfather. I had wired an on-off switch under my pillow in case anyone came into the room and found me out. The sound of Nat King Cole's velvet tones at midnight is still one of the best ways to end a stressful day."

You pay your money and take your choice but fine dining it's not

AS WE all know, the mantra for modern consumerism is choice. And the owners of Chom Chom in Canterbury have taken that approach with their restaurant.

Why go to a boring eatery that specialises in one kind of cuisine when you can have the choice of three or even more in one place?

Chom Chom gives the customer the whole range of British popular fare (most of that not being traditional British cooking, of course).

On offer is Indian, Chinese, Thai, Italian and Greek food, along with dishes from a few other countries to add yet more to the selection.

Fine dining it is not. Once shown to your table you are told to take a plate and wander along the various vats of curry, veg and sauces bubbling away on the buffet counter.

When you reach the end you can add pizza or chips to the curry, or deep-fried chicken wings. You can even cover everything in wasabi sauce if you wish.

Once your rather small plate is full you return to your seat to scoff the lot as quickly as you can.

It's not totally primal. The waiters (who don't really wait) kindly take away your plate once it is empty so you can quickly get up and get a clean one. Sometimes they even do it before you have finished.

You can be in mid-conversation chewing on an onion ring when a hand descends from over your shoulder to whisk away the china.

To be fair, the food isn't bad. The best bets are the curries, whether Indian or Thai.

The Italian element really comes down to a very plain and boring pizza and a few cold pasta salads.

Surprisingly, the vegetarian choice on the night my partner and I dined (that sounds rather grand for what we actually did) was not great.

At vegetarian Indian buffets I have been to in London the chefs really show off their skills to produce a wide range of dishes.

Perhaps the best part is at the end. The range of desserts and nicely-prepared fruit on offer is good.

I enjoyed some jelly and strawberry mousse, which tasted like Angel Delight. This was topped off by as much as we wanted of that weird swirly ice-cream you get from a van at a country fair.

Actually I got a bit carried away at the dispenser and a wobbly dairy worm ended up overflowing the bowl and across the plate underneath. Not that that stopped me stuffing my face until it was all gone.

I suppose I could have gone one better and just held my mouth under the tap.

It wasn't totally unhealthy – I took a few grapes and a small chunk of watermelon just to make sure I was getting my five a day.

So if you just want food without any frills you could do worse than Chom Chom.

The bill came to £36.74, including a bottle of Italian beer and a sparkling mineral water.

Mind you, I did choke when I saw the £3.34 service charge... considering I did it myself.

No 1 Smithery wins awards Design triumph

Historic Dockyard, Chatham
Open 10am-4pm
01634 823800
www.thedockyard.co.uk

A FORMERLY dilapidated historic building at the heart of Chatham's Historic Dockyard has won a second award from the Royal Institute of British Architects (RIBA).

No 1 Smithery was designed by the dockyard team, the Imperial War Museum and National Maritime Museum to create a site for national treasures and touring exhibitions. The accolade, for "re-use of a redundant building", was awarded to the dockyard building after judges deemed it to have shown excellent elements of ingenuity of design and craftsmanship. It provides touring and permanent galleries for the collections of some 4,000 ship models and educational events.

01843 577000

MARGATE Museum will be marking Christmas with a seasonal look at the town's festive past.

The exhibition will show how Christmas was celebrated in the year that artist JMW Turner came to the area, specifically the Georgian era of 1827.

Alongside the exhibition will be several free performances from Robert Poulter's New Model Theatre on Friday, December 9. These productions will chart the growth of tourism in Margate from the early days of 'sea bathing' up to the modern day. On Saturday, December 17, the East Kent Hoodeners will be acting out a traditional Kentish Midwinter performance that has been practised in the county since the 1730s... a must for any fans of Kentish folklore.

PREPARATIONS are under way for the Christmas pantomime at the Theatre Royal Margate, where Hansel And Gretel will be on stage for December.
So what do you do when there is not enough food to go round? Hansel and Gretel's cruel stepmother thinks she has the answer: send them packing into the wood to get lost! But she doesn't bargain on what happens next.
Families will join Hansel and Gretel on their adventure through the wood and discover the fabulous but deadly gingerbread house, with its icing-sugar roof and walls of fudge. Watch out for the witch looking to make her own dish of the day.
The show comes from the team that brought you Ali Baba and an enchanting Snow Queen last year.

Thanet's Celebrity Pirate Panto

Stars from this year's pantomime, Robinson Crusoe And The Crazee Caribbean Pirates, gathered recently at Margate Winter Gardens.

Heading the cast is children's favourite, CITV presenter Joe Challonds. Joe regularly hosts the popular show Prove It!. He'll be hoping for less gunging as Robinson Crusoe!

Also on board is one of radio's best loved voices – Carole Boyd who plays Linda Snell in The Archers. Carole is no stranger to children's entertainment, having provided the voices for all the female characters in Postman Pat.

Also from the world of radio is Johnny Lewis who hosts the morning programme on KMFM.

Local favourites on stage include Serena Sykes as Princess Moonflower and stand-up comedian, Nick Beat.

Robinson Crusoe And The Crazee Caribbean Pirates is presented by the same team who brought professional pantomime back to the Winter Gardens last year with their successful production of Cinderella.

Robinson Crusoe And The Crazee Caribbean Pirates opens at the Winter Gardens on December 15th and runs until December 30th.

The star and his big band head to the Tunbridge Wells Forum for what is sure to be a rock'n'roll reminder of years gone by. Otway's autobiography Rock and Roll's Greatest Failure outsold, by a factor of ten, all the records he had released since his hit and has helped to push the star back into the mind of the musical public. Otway will be supported by the David Sinclair Trio, plus the local duo Night Without Sleep. Failure will not be an option!

Film charts rich history Barging in...

Royal Cinema, Faversham
Wednesday, December 7, 1pm
Free entry
01795 591211

RED Sails is a documentary that explores the influence of the Thames sailing barge in the development of trade in the UK. Through interviews and archive footage, the film looks at the Thames barge's contribution to the building of Victorian London. It also looks in detail at the craftsmen and their trades, which made the Thames barge so unique. A few have become barge yachts for chartering, but the Thames barge lives on through the recent restoration of one of the most famous, the Cambria. The first public screening will be free of charge at the Royal Cinema in Faversham, itself a town with a long maritime history. The DVD will be for sale at the showing.

STUNNING: Central St Giles near Covent Garden

Building firm lands 'greatest accolade'

KENT company United House Developments has won the prestigious Housebuilder Of The Year accolade – the biggest prize in new homes – at the What House? Awards.

In addition to the top title, the company also scooped a total of three gold awards, a silver and a bronze award at the ceremony at London's Grosvenor House Hotel.

United House Developments, based in Swanley, won the best medium housebuilder gold award; two gold awards in partnership with London Newcastle for its development at Arundel Square in Islington for best exterior design and best landscape design; and silver for best apartment at Central St Giles, the acclaimed Renzo Piano development near Covent Garden.

It also received a bronze best partnership award for regeneration and delivery of new homes with Hounslow council and Hounslow Homes in Beavers Lane, Hounslow.

Now in their 30th year, the What House? Awards with www.whathouse.co.uk are the most coveted and longest-established new-homes awards, celebrating the achievements of housebuilders and developers in the UK, both large and small, across 21 categories.

Rupert Bates, editorial director of whathouse.co.uk, said: "The What House? Awards, considered the Oscars of the housebuilding industry, showcase some of the UK's most exciting and dynamic new developers, as well as highlighting innovations among the industry's big players."

"It is great to see that, even in an extremely tough economic climate, so many housebuilders and developers have sustained their ethos on quality. United House Developments, the residential arm of the United House Group, is one such builder that has not and never will compromise on this and we are proud to have awarded them housebuilding's biggest award."

The judging panel at the What House? Awards said: "We would like to congratulate United House on winning the new-homes industry's greatest accolade."

"In the last year, United House Developments has delivered 191 units, with a vast price range – from a £130,000 apartment in Hounslow, up to a £5.5 million property at Central St Giles in London. There is more to come, with future developments totalling more than £500m."

United House Developments is the specialist private residential development arm of the United House Group.

Jeffrey Adams, group chief executive, said: "Housebuilder Of The Year is the ultimate accolade and we are delighted the quality of our homes and ability to deliver has been recognised."

"We have a highly-talented and dedicated team who take a bespoke approach to external design and interior specification. Our developments are characterised by outstanding architecture, meticulous attention to detail and a real environmental agenda. Our schemes are delivered by a highly-skilled in-house construction team who are in control and committed to creating the best developments."

"Our strengths have been in our agility and the breadth of our business. Our relationships with key clients in local authorities, housing associations and the private sector continue to go from strength to strength."

Nick Stonley, managing director of United House Developments, said: "Everyone has played a vital part in winning this amazing cache of awards. They are a fantastic team and these awards are testament to their hard work."

"We are building homes in areas where people want to live and breathing new life into those districts through regeneration."

WINTER SERVICES

Take simple steps to keep your home nice and warm

WINTER is the most testing time for the home – and burst pipes, blocked chimneys, icy paths and drives and leaking roofs are all worries as the weather grows colder and the days shorter.

But there are some things that can be done to minimise risks – and help to keep down heating costs.

Consider installing double- or even triple-glazed windows. This can improve the heating system in your house as these can keep the warm air locked in. As an added advantage, they can also help to block out the sound of roaring wind and pounding rain, keeping the family feeling cosy.

Improved insulation is also a high priority. Make sure your house is installed with wall- and floor-insulating materials to stop the warmth from escaping. Again this is an important way of keeping down heating bills as well as making environmental sense.

Check water pipes. If possible, use thermal blankets to protect drainage lines that are exposed to freezing to avoid accidents as these can be extremely costly and inconvenient.

A cold-weather check on how your house is going to cope over the coming months is always a good idea, too.

Expert advice is something that can prevent a disaster in the home in the near future – and you'll thank yourself for your foresight and investment if when spring comes no problems have been encountered.

Kent Fire And Rescue Service is issuing a reminder to residents about the importance of getting chimneys swept following a rise in the number of chimney fires.

Since the start of November, fire crews across the county have dealt with 18 fires involving chimneys and flues, and with colder weather setting in, so is this trend.

With many people lighting open fires and wood-burning stoves for the first time since last winter, any build-up of soot and ash can lead to the chimney or flue catching fire, presenting a real risk to your home.

Head of community safety Stuart Skilton said: "At this time of year we tend to see an increase in chimney fires, and the consequences can be devastating. A fire of this nature can smoulder undetected for some time and once it takes hold can cause a lot of damage to your property and result in injury to you and your loved ones.

"People need to realise that just three breaths of toxic smoke from a fire in your home can be deadly.

"I would urge residents to get their chimneys and flues checked and swept or cleaned regularly to ensure they are in good working order and fit for use.

"It is also vital to have working smoke alarms fitted to ensure you and your family are alerted in the unfortunate event of fire in the home."

BACK IN STYLE:
The sixth-generation BMW 3-Series marks a return to good looks for the marque

BMW 3-Series expands boundaries of space

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

HE might be gloomy about business, but Company Car Man at least has something to look forward to – the all-new BMW 3-Series arriving in two months' time.

The '3' remains the motor that many a 'user chooser' aspires to, and there's also a queue of people waiting to buy it on the used car market when he's finished with it.

It's the sixth generation of a model launched in the mid-70s to replace the hugely successful 2002 – the car that established BMW as a producer of small driver-pleasing models.

The original 3-Series was up to that task and famed for introducing the driver-orientated dashboard that became a BMW trademark.

It was followed by the pivotal 1980s second generation car, the darling of the yuppies in the Thatcher era.

Subsequent evolutions made the '3' into the perennial UK best seller in the family/compact executive sector, even outselling the Ford Mondeo. The styling has been contentious of late though – along with 'love it or hate it' details across the BMW range generally – but generation six returns to crowd-pleasing lines.

Best rival:
Mercedes C-Class

As with so many cars now, it has grown yet shed kilos to deliver greener targets set by markets and governments. BMW says it's cheaper to run, but livelier in performance too, while also delivering better ride comfort without compromising the car's legendary rear-wheel drive handling.

It carries over the classic 3-Series short front overhang, with a 50mm longer wheelbase than before; it might not sound much but translates into the biggest cabin of the generations so far.

It also boasts all the eco-friendly Efficient Dynamics tricks that the German premium marque has adopted, while retaining its image as the Ultimate Driving Machine.

Four engines are offered at launch, with most buyers going for the two-litre diesel options, 184 and 163bhp, but BMW is also making much of an all-new two-litre petrol turbo unit developing 245bhp, lots of low down diesel-style pulling power and offering 0-62mph in under six seconds while averaging in the mid-40s for mpg.

And there's a classic BMW straight-six petrol unit offering three litres and 306bhp plus better emissions and economy than its predecessor.

Order books are open and the car appears in showrooms in early February, from £24,880.

A level playing field on tax for the new hybrid PEUGEOT dealers are celebrating a victory that has slashed tax bands on the 3008 Hybrid4 diesel-electric crossover arriving in showrooms now, priced from £26,995.

The ruling will also benefit future diesel hybrids from the French marque.

As the first diesel-electric hybrid to hit the UK market, the Hybrid4 looked like falling foul of legislation designed to promote eco-friendly petrol hybrids against conventionally-powered models, but HM Revenue and Customs has stated that none of Peugeot's forthcoming Hybrid4 cars will incur a 3 per cent diesel surcharge yet will benefit from the 10 per cent threshold for personal Benefit in Kind taxation.

A Peugeot spokesman welcomed the clarification, adding that the 3008 Hybrid4 offered: "Low fuel costs, low emissions, low BIK and, for the company, lower Employer National Insurance contributions, alongside an allowance for the company to offset 100 per cent of the list price, in the first year, against its taxable profits.

"Let's not forget, in addition, the 3008 Hybrid4 delivers 74mpg, 200bhp, four-wheel drive and electric mode – a truly unique and innovative vehicle."

With CO₂ emissions of just 99g/km, the car is also exempt from road tax and the London congestion charge.

The 3008 hybrid power pack uses a 2.0-litre HDi 163bhp diesel engine to propel the front wheels and a 37bhp electric motor for the rear wheels, effectively creating an all-wheel drive system.

The Hybrid4 system will soon be an option on the Peugeot 508 – the marque's Ford Mondeo rival – and its proposed 'rough'n'tough' 508RXH spin-off, giving a wider choice in the hybrid sector, which has been dominated by smaller models and the Lexus premium range of petrol hybrids.

Dashing new Astra goes after its premium rivals

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

WE made a film once about a Vauxhall that deserved to be judged on merit rather than its mainstream badge.

It was the Antara SUV; it sounded like the capital of Turkey and proved to be a capital one itself, being far too pricey; it's one thing to make a mainstream car look like a premium rival, but unwise to price it like one.

But the video theme was sound; by keeping the badge hidden until the end, the viewer was forced to judge the car by its classy looks and upmarket interior.

Vauxhall's latest offering would rate similar treatment, because the new Astra GTC (from £18,495) really deserves judgement on merit.

As the letters imply it's a GT cum coupe to look at and if the mainstream versions in the showrooms now are something to rave about, then look out for the VXR performance flagship due next year.

Of course, it's really a fancy three-door version of the existing Astra five-door and Sports Tourer (estate) models but, remember, in years gone by such a car would have been the cheap and plain Jane of the range.

The current vogue, which Vauxhall helped start with the previous generation Astra Sports Hatch, is to turn the whole thing on its head and make the three-door into a racy little number that will turn heads.

The latest Astra models were already head turners but this new addition is the halo car of the range. Available only in upmarket Sport and SRI trim, it is going head-to-head with other affordable coupes like VW's Scirocco rather than the German marque's three-door version of the Golf.

Vauxhall also fancies a tilt at premium three-doors like the BMW 1-Series and Audi A3 – the GTC certainly has them licked for looks.

MERIT:
 Vauxhall's new Astra GTC ticks all the boxes for styling and drive, making it a seriously classy car to look out for

Apart from the cabin, it has been heavily modified from the five-door Astra hatch to the point where Vauxhall actually prefers to call it a standalone model range – the UK is expected to be its biggest market.

Vauxhall/Opel's excellent British-led design team, under Mark Adams, has created a different side profile for the GTC, but still using the sculptured 'blade' theme introduced on the Insignia.

The GTC also has a cleverly pinched window line towards the rear, suggesting a coupe shape, while actually preserving a roof height that enables adults to travel in the back and retain a decent boot area. The car appears to sit wider and lower on the road too, but can it live up to its sporting stance?

No problem. The Astra five-door showed that Vauxhall engineers have created one of the best chassis in its class and the GTC has been tweaked further with front-end details imported from the impressive Insignia VXR sporting model, largely to cure a tendency on high-powered versions of the previous Astra to fight the driver's input on the steering wheel when under heavy acceleration – classic 'torque steer'.

The rear end is also slightly adapted from the original car and the overall effect is handling that can be relied on even on challenging UK roads and surfaces, without having to endure a bone-jarring ride either, although a FlexRide damping system can be specified for £790, which automatically adapts to the prevailing roads and driving.

The car's impressive steering matches effort to speed accurately, without losing the feedback essential when tackling difficult roads and surfaces.

Our test car, the 180PS (178bhp) 1.6-litre turbocharged petrol version made all the right noises and was also lively enough to prove that the torque steer problem has been cured.

Yes, judge this sporty and classy Vauxhall on merit.

You're nicked!

FORD'S all-new Focus ST hot hatchback has landed a starring role in new movie The Sweeney.

Flying Squad detectives Jack Regan (Ray Winstone) and George Carter (Ben Drew aka Plan B) will use black Focus STs in their battle against crime.

The car will be premiered to the public by summer – the film follows in September.

New Passat gets tough

VOLKSWAGEN is to follow the route of sister brands Audi and Skoda in producing a rougher and tougher estate model.

The Passat Alltrack arrives in early 2012 and differs from the standard Passat Estate in having 4Motion four-wheel drive and a raised ride height for better off-road use, plus some upper and underbody protection from scrapes.

Skoda's 2011 record showing

BRITAIN'S economy might be facing another recession, but that's not affecting demand for Skoda's no nonsense cars.

The VW-owned Czech brand has broken its record annual registration figure last year – in 11 months.

Skoda UK registered 41,240 cars in 2010 – as of November 28 this year's total was 41,313. The brand expects to smash the 45,000 barrier by the year's end.

Chevy and Vauxhall team works well, says dealer

By Sam Davison

editorial@kosmedia.co.uk

CHEVROLET will launch a sharply styled all-new Aveo supermini early next year, significantly strengthening the appeal of the General Motors value brand.

The car fits the new twin grille corporate look better than the current Aveo, which dates back to the former Daewoo Kalos and had the Chevy nose grafted on late in life.

However, there are sure to be deals on that car as it enters its run-out phase ahead of replacement, underlining the American brand's value for money pitch, already shown by the keenly-priced 5-7-seat Captiva SUV, seven-seat Orlando MPV, stylish Cruze family saloon and hatchback and compact Spark city car.

"Unlike some brands that major on value, we don't think Chevrolet cuts corners on interior quality," said Graham Hawkes, new car sales manager for Perrys at Dover.

"Buyers don't feel short-changed when they see the cabins of cars like the Captiva and Orlando – they look like they should cost far more. And the Chevy brand may offer value, but it's not seen as downmarket."

He also applauded how well the marque fits with Perrys' Vauxhall dealerships in Kent – Broadstairs, Canterbury and another alongside the Chevrolet showroom at Dover:

"They make a pretty good fit, with Vauxhall pitched slightly upmarket from Chevrolet, and having two brands on board means there's usually a lot of new models or facelifts to keep up customer traffic.

"We've got the Aveo coming in early 2012, for instance, but our Vauxhall sites are buzzing now with the arrival of the Vauxhall Astra GTC." (See our GTC road test report this issue).

"We cannot expect the same volume of demand as for the Astra five-door, but the GTC is a real halo car for Vauxhall as a brand – stylish, good to drive and be in, and oozing quality in the fit and finish."

A1 access added to Audi line-up

AUDI has boosted appeal for its A1 small hatchback by announcing a new five-door version priced from £13,980.

It has been dubbed the Sportback, a name already used to denote the five-door version of the bigger A3 family hatchback, and is available to order now with deliveries from next spring.

In the meantime though, the German premium brand has also stepped up the appeal of the existing three-door A1 by launching two striking looking special editions – Black and Contrast – plus a sporting 141bhp 2.0-litre diesel engine option (from £17,945).

As the name suggests, the Contrast brings a visually lowering change in roof colour plus lots of upmarket add-ons to the usual A1 Sport spec at a cost of £1,350 extra. The Black also lives up to its name but gets a raft of luxury extras on top of the flagship S Line spec models upon which it is based – all for a further £1,100.

Looking ahead to the A1 Sportback derivatives, which cost an additional £560 over equivalent three-door A1s, Audi claims the car will offer full five-seat capability with a slight increase in head and shoulder room.

It will give the A1 a considerable edge over its most obvious rival, the BMW Mini, which does not offer a five-door version in hatchback format.

The Sportback's standard kit includes alloys, split/folding rear seat, front and rear electric windows and air con. Interestingly, there will also be the Mini-style contrasting roof option.

Powertrain options at launch are three petrol turbo engines and one turbodiesel, ranging from 84bhp to 183bhp with all but the latter having their emissions and consumption efficiency enhanced by an engine start-stop system.

QUALITY NEW & USED TYRES FOR CARS, VANS & MOTORCYCLES

WINTER TYRE SPECIALIST LARGE STOCK OF NEW AND USED WINTER TYRES

What are winter tyres?

Winter tyres are specially designed to grip in the ice and snow. They're perfect for the depths of a British winter, European skiing trips, or countries where it's law to use them.

Narrower than normal road tyres, winter tyres can be fitted on to a new or used set of steel or alloy wheels. You fit the winter wheels and tyres to your vehicle in the winter and change back to your normal wheels in the summer.

Why should I fit winter tyres?

You don't have to use winter tyres by law in the UK, but you do in certain European countries. For icy and snowy conditions winter tyres are far safer - they give far more grip than the wider rubber your vehicle comes with.

Winter tyres will keep you moving when your normal tyres will be skidding and sliding. Kerbing your wheels will be a thing of the past.

Will they fit my vehicle?

Yes. We stock winter tyre and wheel sets for all makes of Family Hatch - Saloon - Sports Car - MPV 4x4 & Commercial. We are highly knowledgeable on recommended downsizing to any vehicle.

All of our packages follow manufactures recommendations and databases used world wide by tyre and wheel manufactures and suppliers

Marathon runner set for London 2012 call

A LONG-DISTANCE runner from Blackheath & Bromley Harriers is expected to be among the first British athletes to guarantee their selection for the Olympic Games.

The decision on the first wave of marathon runners is due to be made public on Monday. As the only male runner to have run the qualifying time, Scott Overall is in pole position to be included on the list to run in London on August 12.

The 28-year-old spent much of his career as a middle distance athlete and only stepped up to the 26.2-mile event earlier this year. The decision paid off spectacularly, with Overall finishing the Berlin Marathon in just under two hours 11 minutes on his debut in September.

Strong Kent influence for women's NZ tour

A THIRD of the England women's squad heading to New Zealand in February will be from county champions Kent.

After helping the squad to two unbeaten series against South Africa last month, Kent skipper Charlotte Edwards (right) will again lead the side.

She will be joined by club-mates Lydia Greenway, Susie Rowe, Laura Marsh and Tammy Beaumont in the 15-strong squad.

England's tour consists of five Twenty20 games and three One Day Internationals.

Tribute paid to beloved scoreboard operator

THE Kent flag was flown at half mast on Thursday after hearing the news long-serving scoreboard operator George Davison had died.

Jamie Clifford, Kent's chief executive, said: "We are a close organisation and George has been a key part of our operation for so many years."

"George's cheery personality brought a great deal to match days at the club, and he will be sadly missed by everyone involved with Kent cricket."

Jackson begins glory bid in Champs Trophy

GREAT Britain's men begin their Champions Trophy campaign this weekend with Ashley Jackson among the squad looking to improve on their runners-up finish last year.

The tournament is the final world ranking event for the men before next summer's Olympics Games, so will provide an indication on the squad's preparation levels.

Jackson, who played junior hockey for Tunbridge Wells, should feature in Britain's opening pool games this weekend against Pakistan and Australia.

Clifford: Kent members should be proud of redevelopment role

By David Pritchard

david.pritchard@archant.co.uk

KENT'S members should take a share of the credit for an encouraging set of financial results brought about largely due to the St Lawrence Ground redevelopment, according to the club's chief executive.

About £5 million has been invested so far on buildings and permanent floodlights at their Canterbury headquarters.

Work has continued this winter with the construction of a new building which will contain a convenience store, offices and three residential flats, while an agreement on the proposed hotel at the ground is expected early in the new year.

The huge revamp was a defining moment in Kent's history and has not been without its critics. Despite some opposition Jamie Clifford, the club's chief executive, believes the membership, who voted five to one in favour of the scheme in 2009, deserve acknowledgement for their role in the transformation.

"I will always say there's a lot more to be done but I think we can be proud of where we've got to," he said.

"The Kent members can be proud because they backed it. It's all very well to say some people were grumbling about it but the majority wanted us to do it."

"Actually, the majority of members throughout the season have been very complimentary so they should take some credit."

The benefits of the redevelopment will be seen in the club's finances for this year. Kent are tight-lipped on the details while the numbers are being audited, but honorary treasurer Simon

Philip told this newspaper: "We hope members are pleasantly surprised at the outcome."

Kent chairman George Kennedy agreed.

"It will be a pleasure to stand up at the AGM and show people that although we put forward a budget showing quite a substantial loss we've done a lot better than that," he said.

"I'm already getting calls from other county chairman saying 'how have you done?'."

"There's quite a few worried people around just now; they're struggling. They use Kent as a yardstick. We got it wrong in the last few years but we've worked very hard indeed to make it what it is now and I think we're on the right track."

"Next year's going to be tough but commercially it's looking up."

After experiencing heavy losses in recent years, there is genuine belief progress is being made. Kent have a financial strategy which extends to 2015, with the aim of securing their long-term position.

Their task will not be helped by a potentially damaging summer next year where county cricket will have to contend with the London Olympics, football's European Championships and fewer Twenty20 home games all coinciding with wider economic problems, but Clifford is optimistic.

He said: "The crucial thing is we have a plan. We are on course on that but it doesn't end this year, it goes into the future."

"The long term is if we can see it to a conclusion the business will be in the right shape to invest in the cricket side, which will then lead to long-term stability."

"The message is at the mo-

COACH SEARCH

EXTERNAL consultants have been brought in to assist in Kent's decision on their next head coach.

More than 50 applicants put themselves forward to succeed Paul Farbrace, who left in September. Of those, 18 were contacted for preliminary discussions last month before being whittled down to six.

The club are now in the process of using consultants as a third party to gain another perspective before the remaining candidates are interviewed.

Jamie Clifford, Kent's chief executive, believes it is a useful tool. He said: "It's a small world in cricket and you can know and not know about an individual by reputation, perception and so on, so you can get under the skin of the thing a bit more by using third parties. Then we will bring it back in-house and do the traditional panel interview."

Kent hope to complete the process by Christmas.

ment we're pleased with the work so far, but there's a lot still to do. The supporters and members should be reassured we're working blooming hard to make sure that plan becomes a reality. There are tough times ahead, we're not there yet and it would be very dangerous for us to punch the air and say 'what a great year' and forget financial results are only a moment in time."

Kent's fixtures for 2012 were unveiled this week. See www.kentnews.co.uk for details.

Uncapped defender hopes GB trip comes in time to claim Olympic slot

THE prospect of a senior Great Britain debut this month has got one Canterbury ladies player hoping there is still time to get into the squad for the London Olympics.

Dilly Newton was included in a 24-strong squad, alongside club-mate Natalie Seymour, which will fly to California on Monday.

The two-week training camp will feature a five-game series against the United States and the 22-year-old sees it as a big chance to stake a claim for next summer's Olympic squad.

She said: "Obviously I'm hoping it's not too late. All I can do is take one step at a time."

"I'm really excited about being in the squad."

For me it's a really good opportunity because I haven't done much with the seniors. It will be a great experience."

Newton, who has had international experience in younger age groups, joined Canterbury from Clifton this summer.

The defender has helped Nick Clark's side to third place in the Women's Premier Division before this weekend's games and has thoroughly enjoyed the start to her career at Polo Farm.

She said: "I heard very good things about Canterbury as a club and about there being a really good atmosphere. I've really had a good time so far."

FOOTBALL

Learning curve gives Gills striker food for thought

By David Pritchard

david.pritchard@archant.co.uk

ATTITUDE can often be the difference between a bright prospect making it big or falling by the wayside after squandering their talent.

In almost 18 months at Priestfield, Stefan Payne has struggled to convert the raw potential which saw him signed by Fulham into performances on a match day. A return of two goals in 33 appearances is a dreary return for a striker, even one who has only started two games, but the 20-year-old is beginning to show progress.

Payne made a telling impact from the bench last month to net the winner in the 3-2 FA Cup replay victory against Bournemouth. The forward readily admits his cameos from the bench have not always been so memorable, but the goal was potentially a milestone.

"To score the winner has been really good for my confidence," he said. "It's the best bit of my career so far at Gillingham. I just couldn't believe it. I kept watching it over and over again on TV. "When I come on, sometimes I don't do as much as I can or as much as I want to, so to contribute to us going through meant a lot.

"You have to get into the game and do a lot, you have to do that to get in the gaffer's head."

With Frank Nouble and Jo Kuffour's loan deals expiring over the next month Payne senses an opportunity, but the youngster needs to convince Andy Hessenthaler he is ready.

The Gills boss believes advances are being made, although it remains a work in progress.

LIVEWIRE: Stefan Payne (above) joined Gills almost 18 months ago after being released by Fulham

He said: "I'm not being critical of Stefan but he has to work harder in training and listen. He's definitely showing he's got ability, but sometimes he beats himself up too much."

The biggest question mark is over his temperament - sent off on loan at Braintree last season, while Hessenthaler admitted Payne should have been red carded against Brighton in August.

Again he offers a candid assessment: "I do lose my head a bit and do stupid things.

"If something happens on the pitch you've just got to think in your head 'get on with it'. More often than not I do react but I try not to."

With his contract expiring at the end of the season, Payne's career at Priestfield could rest on how quickly he continues to progress.

Sport photographer captures coveted European accolade

A PHOTOGRAPHER whose pictures are regularly featured in this newspaper has received a prestigious qualification.

Ady Kerry is now one of less than 50 photographers in the country to be awarded the title of Qualified European Photographer and only one of four in the continent whose chosen specialisation is in sport.

The 43-year-old from Wingham, near Canterbury, submitted a portfolio of 12 pictures across a range of eight sports including hockey, boxing and swimming, to the Federation of European Photographers (FEP), who made their results public this week.

A delighted Kerry, who has worked with Archant KOS Media for several years, said: "I have been working towards this for a couple of years now and am honoured that my work is at a level where it compares with some of the best photographers in Europe."

The next level open to Kerry is the FEP's Master QEP, which is judged on a selection of 20 photos.

County rivals envy our tough away trips, says Fleet boss

A GRUELLING pre-Christmas set of away trips awaits Ebbsfleet United but manager Liam Daish believes the rest of the county's top non-league clubs would relish his side's predicament.

The Fleet visit Cumbria this weekend to take on Barrow in the Conference Premier. After Cambridge United visit Stonebridge Road on Tuesday they take to the road again with a trip to Cornwall for an FA Trophy tie at Truro City, while the following Saturday takes them to Grimsby Town.

The total round trips for the three journeys will see the squad clock up more than 1,600 miles. It is a tough task for a semi-professional squad, but manager Liam Daish insists it is a problem he would much rather face than play closer to home as they did before winning promotion from the Conference South last season.

He said: "We just get on with it, we have to. We're in a nationwide league but as much as they're long trips I'd rather be here than in the comfort zone with local games.

"I'm sure people like Dartford, Dover and Welling and all those teams wish they were playing against ex-league sides."

The Fleet reached the halfway point of the league campaign on Tuesday with a 3-3 draw against Kidderminster Harriers. It took them to 26 points, 11 more than at the same stage when they were last in the division two seasons ago.

BBC fails local TV screen test

“ MAYBE it's a sign of warped values, or maybe I've just been watching regional television for too long, but my first reaction on hearing a story about a rottweiler let loose in a Crawley kindergarten, or an outbreak of rabies at a care home in the same town, is to think: "God that's appalling ... that isn't even in our area."

A little under a year ago Crawley Town suddenly appeared on the radar of the BBC South East Today programme and it wasn't a coincidence that they'd just been drawn against Manchester United in the FA Cup.

For most of their 115-year history Crawley were a non-league team like any other in the south-east, going through cycles of prosperity and poverty, collecting a few trophies and enjoying the odd cup run.

But for the past three seasons they have been on the rise, earning the tag of the non-league Manchester City and investing heavily in a squad that won promotion to the Football League.

What they've never really been is part of the BBC South East area, which nominally covers Kent and Sussex but in reality broadcasts to only certain areas in both counties.

In some ways the South East is spoiled by the BBC. It's one of their smallest regions in the UK and it's an infinitely better service than Meridian, which long ago abandoned any pretence at being a credible local broadcaster when the then-head of ITV Michael Grade decided his company "couldn't afford" regional news.

The result was to drag local football coverage back 30 years. Meridian were handed a giant area that spanned as far as Swindon and Bournemouth while pretending London didn't exist.

Most aerials in Crawley itself pick up their news coverage from the Crystal Palace transmitter and BBC London, but as of this season Town have been treated as one of "our" clubs by South East Today, who have form when it comes to using stories from other areas. They covered Brighton & Hove Albion for years before the city switched from the South region to the South East and continue to maintain the façade that Charlton are a Kent club.

This matters because it deprives non-league clubs in Kent (and Sussex) of airtime that could prove crucial in pulling in fans. If South East Today covered the four highest-ranked sides actually in their area, bulletins would focus on Brighton, Gillingham, Dover and Eastbourne (Dartford and Ebbsfleet falling into the London area).

As things stand non-league sides only get a look in when there's a cup run, or on Radio Kent, which has its critics but does a far better job at being even-handed to local teams - and also has the inestimable advantage of being free of doe-eyed presenters who say "It was bad weekend for our teams", while grinning the gormless grins only regional TV presenters can quite master. **”
